

CIF's Resource Roundup: Human Resources.

(Oct 2016)

HR Q&A: What Managers & Supervisors Need to Know about HR; Charity Village

Most supervisors and managers have some human resources responsibilities built into their job. While it is true that each organization may have different ideas of what these responsibilities are or should be, defining the HR responsibilities you want to have included in management positions will help identify how you can best prepare your people for tasks they may have to undertake now and in the future. This article shares 18 helpful definitions of HR responsibilities.

Staff Management; Imagine Canada

This section of Managing an Organization focuses on key aspects of staff management. Find valuable resources on Policies & Practices; Compensation & Benefits; Legislation & Liability; and Imagine Canada's Standards Section D.

Human Resource Management; SaskCulture

Coordinating the human resources function in a cultural organization can be a challenge, but it is incredibly important to address this area professionally and proactively if you want to attract, retain and develop staff. Even if the organization is a one-person shop, the board should review the organization's human resource practices to ensure fair and consistent treatment for its employee.

HR Toolkit; HR Council

The HR Toolkit is a comprehensive online resource designed to help managers, employees and board members better understand, address and manage issues relating to HR in nonprofits. You can browse the HR Toolkit by using the Resource Centre Navigator on the left side of the page or you can select one of the Access Points above to view content relevant to managers, employees or board members. You can also use the integrated search feature to find information on a specific topic. Watch this video for an overview of how the Toolkit works.

